

TOPIC 1 — POLITICAL CONTROL AND THE FORT KNOX DISPUTE

1 Beter warned that gradual political changes could weaken constitutional safeguards.

He presents an alleged plan, not established history.

2 He cited Sam Ervin's objections to expanding presidential power.

The Constitution must remain a real restraint.

3 Beter alleged that rival party labels concealed common financial control.

That claim requires evidence beyond campaign labels.

4 He argued that congressional inquiries had produced delay and concealment.

A hearing should lead to answers and action.

5 A Brooks letter quoted by Beter denied radioactive storage and cited negative Army tests.

The official letter rejects the allegation.

MARY BROOKS
U.S. TREASURY

6 Beter disputed the letter's description of his vault and gold claims.

A disputed vault description does not prove contamination.

7 He proposed an independent commission with equal nominations from both sides.

Give investigators access and let them test the claims.

8 He called for a transparent report and acceptance of unanimous findings.

Publish the evidence so the public can judge.

TOPIC 2 — ECONOMIC CONTROL AND MONETARY CHAOS

1 Beter called New York's unpaid short-term notes a municipal default.

He saw the payment crisis as a warning.

2 He contrasted the note moratorium with an exchange for longer-term MAC bonds.

The alternatives changed the terms for creditors.

3 He feared that distrust of municipal debt would spread to jobs and public services.

Would other cities lose access to funds?

4 Beter argued that headline averages could hide a broader market decline.

Look beyond the best-known stocks, he urged.

5 He discussed Soviet gold coins as competition for the Kruggerand.

Gold had become part of the monetary contest.

6 He described the Rambouillet compromise over exchange-rate management.

The currencies would remain linked by negotiation.

7 He forecast new gold prices and criticized proposed IMF gold arrangements.

Those forecasts and hidden-deal claims were his interpretation.

8 Beter portrayed the downturn as an artificially deepened depression.

Families needed lasting prosperity, not reassurance alone.

TOPIC 3 — ALLIANCES AND A NUCLEAR WAR FORECAST

- 1 Beter alleged an alliance between corporate power and the Soviet state.

- 2 He forecast a provocation leading to an attack he called Operation Cobra.

- 3 He linked the Vienna OPEC attack to an alleged covert operation.

- 4 He feared that an OPEC shutdown would disrupt Europe and Japan.

- 5 He extended his scenario to oil rivalry and wider conflict in Asia.

- 6 Beter contrasted Kissinger's Soviet diplomacy with Canada's independent course.

- 7 He compared concentrated corporate ownership with centralized state control.

- 8 Beter closed with hope and a call for constitutional civic action.
